Safety Moment

Hazard Trees

According to the U.S. Forest Service, our nation's forests are experiencing declining health conditions. Broken tops, widow-makers (broken or hanging limbs), and root rot in many tree species along with insect infestations, lightning, wind events, drought, and abundant moisture have led to the creation of abnormally high numbers of "hazard trees." Hazard trees include dead trees, live trees with dead parts, and live trees that are unstable due to defects and are within striking distance of people or property. These hazard trees don't just affect our Scouting family during storms. They can fall—and have fallen—at unpredictable times, even when weather conditions are favorable.

News From National

"This could be the most important tool for keeping your Scouts BSA unit going strong"

Reflection through the Troop Self-Assessment program ensures the Scouts BSA program is guided by adults who implement the program as it was designed.

This series of nine self-assessments cover multiple aspects of the Scouts BSA program including:

Membership
Troop meetings
Activities / outings
Patrols and patrol method
Youth leaders
Scoutmaster team
Troop committee
Troop administration and finance

Consider completing these assessments a few times a year - they may come in handy as you're recruiting new youth or building your annual plan!
